How Northern Democrats aid Treason

Some of our readers who claim to be Democrats complain because we have stated that they support the rebellion and seem disposed to deny that their party deserves the odium of such a charge Let us briefly review its course, and see whether it has manifested any loyalty.

As soon as Lincoln was elected, the whole South was on fire with furious wrath There was no pretence that the election was not Constitutional, or that anything had been done to deprive the slave States of a single right belonging to them, but it was assumed by Northern Democrats that there would be trouble, rebellion and war, unless immediate concessions were made in advance to angry men, who under threats demanded privileges unknown to the Constitution Sound and honest policy—on which alone a republican form of Government can be maintained—demanded that these threats should be met by indignant and patriotic denunciation. If they could effect anything in one case, they might in others and thus make an end of Constitutional Government Yet the majority of the Democratic party instead of repudiating all claims of the South, sought thus to be enforced, sympathized with this violence, insisted upon its justice, and demanded that what could not be secured by Constitutional means, should be conceded They wished that threats of violence, of destroying the Union and of drenching the land in blood should effect what the ballot had failed to accomplish. In this way they identified themselves with those who were shortly to become armed traitors in organized rebellion.

Then as the breach grew wider and the clamor of the South more ferocious, they insisted that rebellion could not be resisted and that "coercion" was unconstitutional Those who were preparing for war, could collect arms, raise and equip troops, declare States out of the Union, and do many other acts of similar character, yet there was no Constitutional power to resist them or to prevent the accomplishment of their treasonable purpose! If their course was faintly protested against as unjustifiable and unconstitutional, it was vehemently declared that coercion was, if possible, still more unwarranted, and in this way the rebels were left free to perfect their plans for war This was the system adopted till the end of Buchanan's Administration Arms were accumulated in all the Southern States, troops recruited, munitions of war collected, and the time fully employed to gather means to make the rebellion successful, whenever it should be resisted. During all this period, Vallandigham, Bright, Seymour and every one of that class of Democrats were working not against those who were really in rebellion, but in opposition to the patriotic efforts of men who were not disposed to yield to the wild demands of rebellion, asking to be allowed to secede and to be "let alone" in its attempts to destroy the Union The seizure of Forts, Arsenals and Custom Houses was justified or "damned with faint praise" The warlike preparations at Charleston, and all the developed plans of rebels there, were not deemed sufficient to justify any action on the part of the Government, and in all the proceedings of the National authorities, seeking to furnish supplies to a beleaguered garrison in their own fort, they were blamed by Democrats, while the rebels were justified or excused

When after the capture of Sumter, the voices of these Northern sympathizers were hushed for a time, it was only through fear of the majesty of popular sentiment, and not because they had in any degree or manner changed their infamous purpose They did not cease to love the traitors, but they feared the people For the time they modified their tactics, contenting themselves with suggesting what they dared not directly to avow Of late, however, they have assumed the boldness which they manifested in the beginning, and they proclaim through the press and in their conventions, that the South did not begin the war, is not responsible for it, and that the loss of life, the immense expense and all the agony growing out of it rest upon the Administration and not upon the rebels!

Before the Emancipation Proclamation was made, these same Northern sympathizers declared that the South would not and ought not to submit, when the Proclamation was circulated, kindling new fervor in every loyal heart, they opposed it No matter what was done or neglected to be done, they always found abundant and ample cause to justify the continuance of the rebellion. Their sole object has been from first to last to put the Government and its supporters in the wrong and in so doing to justify and excuse the rebels Thus they have bitterly condemned confiscation, recruiting in the rebel States, enlisting the negroes and everything calculated to weaken the enemy and to strengthen the Union, and have sought to create popular prejudice against the Administration and its friends, and to give its benefits to the South

The motive for all this is clear and undoubted the Democratic party love the rebellion—it is as true to it at the North as the traitors are at the South Its leaders are operating with Davis and his minions and it is time—it is high time that the people should fully, clearly and distinctly understand that the real purpose of the Democracy is the success of Treason! This is their name and to effect this all their labors are directed

The Latest Dodge —The Boston Post and some other Democratic papers in the east which favor McClellan's nomination and election begin to speak of him as the great emancipator," and dispose to make him the champion of abolition These organs evidently feel the tendency and pressure of public sentiment in the direction of freedom, and are disposed to make the Democratic party enjoy the honor and the profit of being the supporter of radical measures for shaking off the curse of slavery In this course they show the usual shrewdness of their kind of politicians We do not suppose that they care any more about the moral question, than they did formerly when they were the most zealous defenders of the peculiar institution," and unfalteringly apologized for all the wrongs and wickedness committed in its name but they see plainly that the main of the party that now oppose the constitutional removal of this enormous and unmitigated evil will never enjoy popular confidence while it is equally clear that those, who lead in this grand and beneficent reformation will be long be deemed the patriotic saviors of the country Their love for official power is so great that to secure it as of old, they will not hesitate to jump at any policy which is likely to be popular, and it is not impossible or unlikely that we shall have next fall, the novel spectacle of McClellan running as a radical emancipationist, against Lincoln as a conservative

Light Fingers —A New York correspondent gives the following account of one of those remarkable instances of petty thieving by a rich married woman, which lately occurred in that city, and occasioned some whispering and giggling and elevating of hands and rolling up of eyes amongst the members of the "upper ten"

It appears that the wife of a wealthy merchant who resides in Fourteenth street recently transferred her patronage to the dry goods store of A & P, and has for three months dealt there for a considerable amount—her requisitions in the way of dress goods etc being very large as she has two budding daughters on the tapis, who are remarkable for the elegance and extravagance of their toilets During this space of time a number of expensive articles—lace velvet, ribbons, etc—had been missed and one of the gentlemen whose duty it is to walk the store in elegant costume, and in lofty assumption of great urbanity and indifference keep a sharp lookout upon customers as well as clerks, mentioned his suspicions— he had watched Mrs L, the wife merchant's wife etc Nonsense! Mrs L—! There was no motive She had also quite command of great wealth The gentleman only shrugged his shoulders and after due deliberation his advice was taken Mrs L was spied out and the result was that she was requested to walk into a private room in the building. The dame complied shrugging her plump shoulders and wondering what could be the matter Alone with two partners of the establishment she was informed that the only way to avoid an exposure was to produce the lace veil box of gloves &c which had by some means become concealed beneath her robe Mrs L screamed, stamped threatened the vengeance of Mr L and of the whole corporation but there was no doubt in the matter and the all solving threat of a policeman produced from beneath the Quaker hoop and silk flounces a sort of bag in which the stolen articles were concealed The result of the interview was that a bill was sent to the wife merchant, who footing it without hesitation being violently that his wife was afflicted with a propensity for pilfering of which nothing could cure her and that for years Messrs A——, of Broadway had kept a private account of the stolen articles which had been conveyed from the establishment in the lady's bag—which always went with her upon shopping excursions—and that at the commencement of the year the bill was as regularly settled as any other Had he been aware of his wife's mania of stealing elsewhere he (L) distinctly stated that he should have informed the heads of the establishment of her inconvenient monomania. Mrs L is said in other respects to be a very estimable member of society

State Items —The Oregon Statesman, of the 4th inst says efforts are being made to open a pack trail from the settlements of Linn and Marion counties to the gold mines on the Santiam, afterwards to be made a wagon road The existence of paying mines on the waters of the Santiam is established beyond a doubt and it is important to open the way for a market for produce in that direction The quartz of the Santiam is beginning to attract considerable attention abroad Rich specimens are on exhibition in various places.

An altercation occurred in Scio, on Wednesday morning last, between a man named Charles Thomas and James A Young In the afternoon Thomas followed Young into a store, and attacked him with a knife, cutting him twice so severely that he died in about ten minutes Young was a married man and leaves a wife and several children

Harrison, the man who ran away from Portland some time ago with money belonging to another, broke out of the Albany jail last Wednesday night, and made his escape He had just been sentenced to two years in the penitentiary, on a charge of grand larceny

Growing Popularity of the National Banks —The National banking system is growing into public favor rapidly and surely Whatever opposition the old banks have shown to it or may show to it in the future will not avail all against it The people like the new system, and what they do like is bound to go! The leading bankers of New York see which way the wind is blowing and are earnestly agitating the subject of embarking either wholly or partially under the new law People all over the country begin to show a reluctance to take bills of the old banks without they are very near home They want currency that has the government green mark and will have it Advices from the West say that farmers there are very loth to take bills on eastern banks and are imperative in their demand for specie also in payment for their produce This shows which way the tide of public opinion is setting, and perhaps explains why some of those who have heretofore opposed the national system are now becoming anxious to adopt it —Springfield Republican

Gen Garfield's Speech

The following are the concluding paragraphs of General Garfield's late speech in Congress on the Confiscation resolutions

Mr Speaker if we want a peace that is not a hollow truce we must follow that extreme and that thorough work of this war We must call forth the full manhood of the nation and by the fire of battle melt the minds of men into one mass We must fill the thinned ranks of the army We must assure them that a people will stand by the soldier behind them We must show that we will stand by them with our money and our blood We must tell the army that we will support them in every measure that will sweep away the cause of the whole terrible rebellion We want no half way policy We call for no half way men We call for the whole power of the nation and it must be used We call for the power of the Government in every part of it to be used to the extent of the necessities of war until they are conquered If this be cruelty and persecution I leave the record of it to the future Standing here before the country to-day I call upon the Congress of the United States to take into their hands if they cannot trust the Executive all the power of the States the money the credit and the blood that are necessary to put down the rebellion which they pretend their grievances justify Let them use it like oil and put it on the wheels of the machinery of war Let them use it like the summer rain that falls upon the earth and causes the grass to grow and the corn to ripen Let them use it as the sunlight that shines upon their knee and ripens it on the spot where brave men fell, and marble columns rise to commemorate it

Let the traitors at the South know that the loyal people of the North will stand by the Government and by the brave men who are in the field fighting its battles, and utterly destroy them!" "We would probably lose votes by it" How would it effect your party if we should be beaten?" It would probably help us in votes

That, gentlemen, is the kind of support the Army is receiving in what should be in the house of its friends Thus, gentlemen is the kind of support these men—some of them—are inclined to give this country and its army in this terrible struggle I hasten to make honorable exceptions I know there are honorable gentlemen on the other side who do not belong to that category and I am proud to acknowledge them as my friends But I say that the effect of what the majority of them is doing will pull down the fabric of our Government by aiding their friends over the border to do it. There friends, I say, for when the Ohio election was about to come off, in the army of Chattanooga there was more anxiety in the rebel camp than in our own The pickets had talked face to face and made daily inquiry how the election in Ohio was going And at midnight on the 13th of October, when the telegraphic news was flashed down to us announced to the army that the Union had sixty thousand majority in Ohio there arose a shout all along the line from that rainy midnight from every tent which rent the skies with jubilees, and sent despair to the hearts of those men beyond our lines who were waiting and watching across the border It told them their colleagues their sympathizers, their friends I had almost said their emissaries had failed to sustain themselves in turning the tide against our friends in the contest And from that hour but not till that hour, the army had felt safe from the enemy behind it.

I deprecate these apparently partisan remarks at first me to make them but it hurts me more to know they are true I would not make them but that I wish to unmask the pretext that we are working along all in a body for the vigorous prosecution of the Government I cannot easily forget the treatment the conscription bill met the next morning Even the few men in the army who voted for Vallandigham wrote on the backs of their tickets 'Draft, draft' That was the voice of the Army I conclude by returning once more to the resolution before us— Let no weak sentiments, of misplaced sympathy defer us from inaugurating a measure which will cleanse our nation and make it the fit home of freedom and glorious manhood Let us not despise the severe wisdom of our revolutionary fathers, when they served their generation in a similar way Let the Republic drive from its soil the traitors that have conspired against its life, as God and His angels drove Satan and his host from heaven He was not too merciful to be just and to hurl down in chains to everlasting darkness the traitor angel! who rebelled against Him

Longevity and Tea —Many have tried to master the secret of longevity We believe it was an Englishman who thought he had found it in early rising after questioning all those old men who came before him for many years But many have lived to a great age who have not been early risers, and going in abundance of sleep is certainly more important to health than getting up early A correspondent of the Albany Journal who visited a man that was supposed to be one hundred and seven years old says he was particularly anxious to know what he had brought him thus very far on life's journey He accordingly asked the wife of the venerable patriarch Her answer was terse and suggestive, though rather unromantic! He don't live on festivals but he lives more on tea He is an interesting fact on tea drinkers, whose favorite evening beverage has been removed only about a dozen years

Succeeded at Last —Everything being in readiness about the Maria, at one o clock yesterday afternoon a gang of men were put to work with buckets, and in three hours the hull floated off the chains, and the job of raising the sunken craft was finished. All conjectures concerning the manner in which she was sunk, about her being scuttled, or otherwise foully dealt with, are broken up, from the fact that nothing of the kind are visible, but the supposition is that she sank of her own accord, by water leaking through warped seams—and being made very fast, no doubt rested hard against the wharf, and gradually cantan over, sank The cylinders and boiler will next be taken out

Willamette Theatre — A good house greeted the performance of the "Gamester," last evening, and the play well deserved more generous patronage To night Mrs Hayne will appear in the famous comedy of the "Duke's Wager," never before performed in Portland It is well worthy of the attention of those who love sterling comedy, and such may be assured that Mrs Hayne and Miss Gass will thoroughly do their respective parts in making it successful On account of the unusual length and interest of this play, nothing else will be offered this evening

Oregon Tobacco —J B Gray Esq, has shown us a superior article of tobacco, which is a sample of what he is manufacturing from the leaf grown in Oregon So far as we are able to judge of the quality of this weed, it is just as good as an imported article, and we think we can see a time ahead when it will be as useless to send tobacco to Oregon from distant ports, as it would be to ship coal to Newcastle With proper care and attention tobacco can be raised and manufactured here in such quantities as to become an article of export

Drowned —The steamer Julia took a company of the Oregon Cavalry, on her way up the Columbia from Fort Vancouver yesterday together with the horses and equipments When within sight of the Cascades one of the soldiers fell overboard The steamer stopped, a boat was lowered, and search made for the unfortunate man, but he was no more to be seen We understand he has fallen a victim to whisky. We did not learn his name

Arrival of the Cowlitz —The steamer Cowlitz, arrived from Monticello about three o clock yesterday The bark Samuel Merritt was met on the passage below the mouth of Lewis river The Iwanowna was still at St Helens, but was about ready to put to sea, with 16,000 feet of piles, and fifty cords of wood

How it was Done —A San Francisco dray man, during the recent great rush of freight to vessels for this city, anticipating a long line of teams loaded his dray with empty shoe boxes and took his place in the line Some shipper, anxious to get his goods on board, when the rush commenced, offered the dray man $30 for his chance The offer was accepted, and the drayman added that "for $2 more he could have his lead"

For the Mines —An unusual number of heavy freight wagons were on the streets yesterday, with cattle attached, making their way towards the new mines As many of them as can be accommodated, will proceed up the Columbia by boat this morning Some of these teams look rather weak for the trip, and if heavily loaded will be very apt to "petor out"

Boom Broke —During the heavy gale of Monday last the boom belonging to the steam saw mill of Messrs Estes & Stimson, broke away, and the logs were scattered freely, but as the wind came from the right direction they were easily collected again, at the head of Knott's wharf

A Fine Pack Train —Mr Levi Friedenrich, of Vancouver, has just returned from California overland, with a fine train of pack mules, for use the coming season in the mining districts

Clean Cargo —The hatches were removed from the clipper Jenny Jones yesterday, and the work of discharging the cargo commenced The goods are in fine condition The clipper will be ready to receive freight to-morrow

Sheep for Victoria —There was a fine flock of sheep brought into the city yesterday, for shipment to Victoria They number about 200 head, and will be taken by the Jenny Jones

No Telegraphic Reports —The severity of the late storms have reduced the telegraph wire in several places, hence we are without our regular dispatches The line was worked through to Salem yesterday

County Convention —The County Committee have issued their call for a Union County Convention, to be held May 7th next Precinct meetings are recommended to be held on Saturday, April 23d The call will be found under our editorial head

Address —Dr Bowlby will address the people at Ames' Chapel on Tuesday, April 25th The address will relate to the Sanitary Commission

Millinery —We would invite attention to the new advertisement of Mrs S S Kline practical milliner and dress maker, corner of First and Salmon streets in the building formerly occupied by the Advocate printing office

Dalles City Election —We are informed that on Monday the following officers were elected at the Dalles C R Meigs, Mayor J S Reynolds, Recorder, N Olney, Marshal H J Waldron, Treasurer, L Brown W Harmon, L Coffin, A Clark and R C Munger Councilmen The whole vote was something less than 400, and the officers elected are known to be, and were chosen as unconditional Union men

SUCCEEDED AT LAST.—Everything being in readiness about the Maria, at one o'clock yesterday afternoon a gang of men were put to work with buckets, and in three hours the hull floated off the chains, and the job of raising the sunken craft was finished. All conjectures concerning the manner in which she was sunk, about her being scuttled, or otherwise foully dealt with, are broken up, from the fact that nothing of the kind are visible, but the supposition is that she sunk of her own accord, by water leaking through warped seams—and being made very fast, no doubt rested hard against the wharf, and gradually canting over, sank. The cylinders and boiler will next be taken out.

WILLAMETTE THEATRE.—A good house greeted the performance of the "Gamester," last evening, and the play well deserved more generous patronage. To night Mrs. Hayne will appear in the famous comedy of the "Duke's Wager," never before performed in Portland. It is well worthy of the attention of those who love sterling comedy, and such may be assured that Mrs. Hayne and Miss Gaw will thoroughly do their respective parts in making it successful. On account of the unusual length and interest of this play, nothing else will be offered this evening.

OREGON TOBACCO.—J. B. Gray, Esq., has shown us a superior article of tobacco, which is a sample of what he is manufacturing from the leaf grown in Oregon. So far as we are able to judge of the quality of this weed, it is just as good as an imported article, and we think we can see a time ahead when it will be as useless to send tobacco to Oregon from distant ports, as it would be to ship coal to Newcastle. With proper care and attention tobacco can be raised and manufactured here in such quantities as to become an article of export.

STEAMER.—The steamer Julia took a company of the Oregon Cavalry, on her way up the Columbia from Fort Vancouver yesterday, together with the horses and equipments. When within sight of the Cascades one of the soldiers fell overboard. The steamer stopped, a boat was lowered, and search made for the unfortunate man, but he was no more to be seen. We understand he has fallen a victim to the fatality. We did not learn his name.

ARRIVAL OF THE COWLITZ.—The steamer Cowlitz arrived from Monticello about three o'clock yesterday. The bark Samuel Merritt was met on the passage, below the mouth of Cowlitz river. The Iwanowna was still at St. Helens, but was about ready to put to sea, with 16,000 feet of piles, and fifty cords of wood.

HOW IT WAS DONE.—A San Francisco drayman, during the recent great rush of freight, sent in for this city, anticipating a long line of teams, loaded his dray with empty shooks and took his place in the line. Some supper, anxious to get his goods on board, when the rush commenced, offered the drayman $30 for his chance. The offer was accepted, and the draymen added that "for $2 more he could have his load."

FOR THE MINES.—An unusual number of heavy freight wagons were on the streets yesterday, with cattle attached, making their way towards the new mines. As many of them as can be accommodated, will proceed up the Columbia by boat this morning. Some of these look rather weak for the trip, and if heavily loaded will be very apt to "peter out."

DOCK, ETC.—During the heavy gale of Friday last, the boom belonging to the steam sawmill of Messrs. Estes & Stimson, broke away, and the logs were scattered freely, but as the wind came from the right direction they were easily collected again, at the head of Ankeny's wharf.

A FINE PACK TRAIN.—Mr. Levi Frieden, of Vancouver, has just returned from California overland, with a fine train of pack mules, for use the coming season in the mining districts.

CORAL CARGO.—The hatches were removed from the clipper Jenny Jones yesterday, and the work of discharging the cargo commenced. The goods are in fine condition. The clipper will be ready to receive freight to-morrow.

STOCK FOR VICTORIA.—There was a fine lot of sheep brought into the city yesterday, for shipment to Victoria. They number about 200 head, and will be taken by the Jenny Jones.

NO TELEGRAPHIC REPORTS.—The severity of the late storms have reduced the telegraph wire in several places, hence we are without regular dispatches. The line was worked through to Salem yesterday.

COUNTY CONVENTION.—The County Commissioners have issued their call for a Union County Convention, to be held May 7th next. Precinct meetings are recommended to be held on Saturday, April 23d. The call will be found under our editorial head.

ADDRESS.—Dr. Bowley will address the people at Ames' Chapel on Tuesday, April 26th. The address will relate to the Sanitary Commission.

MILLINERY.—We would invite attention to the new advertisement of Mrs. S. S. Kline, practical milliner and dress maker, corner of First and Salmon streets, in the building formerly occupied by the Advocate printing office.

DALLES CITY ELECTION.—We are informed that on Monday the following officers were elected at the Dalles: C. R. Meigs, Mayor; J. S. Reynolds, Recorder, N. Olney, Marshal; H. J. Waldron, Treasurer, L. Brown, W. Haynes, L. Coffin, A. Clark and R. C. Mutton, Councilmen. The whole vote was something over, less than 400, and the officers elected are known to be, and were chosen as unconditional Union men.

THE OFFICIAL CANVASS.—Below we present the official result of the canvass for city officers on Monday. There are some slight alterations in this statement from the one we presented yesterday morning.

SANITARY MEETING AT ALBANY.—While at Albany last week we attended a fair held under the management of the Sanitary Aid Society of that place. The entertainment consisted of addresses by Mrs. Odell and Mrs. Thorn, music, vocal and instrumental varied by tableau exercises of an interesting character. The room was well decorated with flags, evergreen, mottoes, &c. At one end was a table set out with "subsistences," where coffee, cakes, pies, etc., were dispensed on receipt of half a dollar from each person. The smiles and gracious attentions of the presiding ladies thrown in gratis. At the other end was a stage upon which after the principal exercises were finished was opened a post office regulated by somewhat different rules from those governing the institution run by Postmaster General Blair, but which seemed to be quite as successfully self sustaining. Letters were addressed to persons who were most suspected of having lovers, acquaintances at them, and upon announcement of the address the party having said quarter was expected to walk up and deposit it with the postmaster in lieu of the letter. The amusement afforded by this institution contributed in no small degree to the enjoyment of the evening, and also to the revenue of the Society. The entertainment was altogether a very pleasant affair. The receipts amounted to $210, clear of all expenses. At the lectures, the evening before, $63 were realized. The effort of the Albany people in behalf of the Sanitary cause, entitle them to the highest credit.—Statesman.

As good wine needs no bush, so Heuston Hastings & Co. of Montgomery street, San Francisco, delight to refer the public to those who patronize them regularly. Being undoubtedly the leading house in their line on the Pacific Coast they do not maintain their supremacy without making every effort to deserve it; and the result is that those who patronize them once urge their friends to go and do likewise. Their store is always full.

DETTER'S HAIR RESTORATIVE FOR BALD HEADS.

IT IS NOT MY INTENTION TO HUMBUG THE PUBLIC. The Restorative has built up a world wide reputation upon its own merits as is manifested by the thousands who have used it to the full extent, as ever invented for the Hair. Read the following certificate:

LEWISTON, Sept. 3d, 1863.

This is to certify, that I have used DETTER'S HAIR RESTORATIVE, and I take great pleasure in recommending it; the public as a safe and effectual preparation for the restoration of the Hair. I was nearly bald when I commenced the use of it, and after using two bottles I find it has produced a fine healthy growth of hair, and that, too, in less than two months. I can therefore recommend it for its great virtues as an efficiency. S. D. RAMSDELL,

The Winds of March are Humming.

BY FITZ-GREENE HALLECK.

The winds of March are humming
Their parting song, their parting song,
And Summer skies are coming,
And days grow long, and days grow long,
I watch, but not in gladness,
Our garden tree, our garden tree;
It bids in silent sadness
Too soon for me, too soon for me.
My second Winter's over,
Alas! and I, alas! and I,
Have no accepted lover—
Don't ask me why, don't ask me why.

'Tis not asleep it is
That love has been, that love has been;
For many a happy bridal
The year has seen, the year has seen;
I've done a bridesmaid's duty
At three or four, at three or four;
My best bouquet had beauty
It's gone more. I seldom more.
My second Winter's over,
Alas! and I, alas! and I
Have no accepted lover—
Don't ask me why, don't ask me why.

He flowers my bosom slighted
One sunny day, one sunny day;
The next they died and faded
Bleak and blight, bleak and bouquet.
In vain, at balls and parties
I've thrown my net;
The watching, waiting heart is
Unclosed yet, unclosed yet.
My second Winter's over,
Alas! and I, alas! and I,
Have no accepted lover—
Don't ask me why, don't ask me why.

They tell me there's no hurry
For Hymen's ring, for Hymen's ring;
And I'm too young to marry
'Tis no such thing, 'tis no such thing.
The next Spring tides will dash on
My eighteenth year, my eighteenth year;
If I'm not in a passion
O dear! O dear! O dear! O dear!
My second Winter's over,
Alas! and I, alas! and I,
Have no accepted lover—
Don't ask me why, don't ask me why.

A Story of Dueling.

(Concluded.)

What, then, must be the exuberant, the exultant character of the Maitre d'Armes' emotions upon the present occasion. He is not a talkative man; his words may be few; but his glowing countenance, his demeanor—nervous, enjoyable, self-celebrating—are they not eloquent? Do they not say to the whole cafe: "Voyez, Messieurs! regardez moi! last night you saw me insulted, abused, outraged; to-night you see me here, beaming, buoyant, supreme. Last night you saw me stained, to-night you see me cleansed. What changes a little day brings forth!—what a perfect cleanser is a steady hand! what a burnisher of dimmed honor is the bright, the swift, the glorious rapier! And the insulter, the avenger, the fierce young man—he is not here to-night; how is this? Heydey! the beardless young man from Lyons, I do not see him here to-night—where can he be?" &c., &c.

Indeed, the elevation of the victor permits him to be generous. He admires the dead man's courage; he acknowledges that his fencing was excellent, his attitude irreproachable.

"My dear Maurice," (speaking to his friend in particular, and to the cafe in reality,) "my dear Maurice, he punished me with the fervor of a Conde. And his defence—was it not impregnable?—could anything penetrate it?—Parbleau! it was a curtain, a wall!"

"Ah! then," said Maurice, "but my friend Achille's coup de grace!"

Achille smiled, his soul was tickled; but suddenly the smile was changed to an expression of intense horror, the bloom of his cheek

The practice of dueling was probably at its height during the latter end of the eighteenth century, and the beginning of the nineteenth.

All Europe was convulsed. New nations were receiving the baptism of blood; old ones were being sacrificed, and by a murderous hand. Dynasties were tottering and tumbling. The political horizon was obscured by a mist, and its hue was crimson.

Mutations were going on everywhere—in mind and matter, in public and private relations, in low and high estates, in opulence and indigence. Everything was being changed, and the universal instrument was the sword. The hand of improvement was bloody.

But even revolution pauses. Occasionally there were lulls.

But the minds of men are not nations. The passions of men are not the phases of polity. These cannot pause. And from these lulls, from these minds, and from these passions, the Duello, the spirit of polite murder, arose from comparative infancy to the acme of its influence. Men were crippled daily and hourly, sometimes for mere pastime, in hot blood, and cold, generously and malignantly. The good swordsman adored it. There were men who could count up their murders on their fingers, and go through the digits of the hands and begin over again.

Achille de Beaumont was just such a one. Achille St. Pierre de Beaumont; step-son of the Marquis de Chesnes; no money; forty years old; and handsome still; Maitre d'Armes and Lieutenant of the Imperial Guard. That is all the description necessary for this story of his doom. Dueling had become his passion, his sole delight. He quarrelled with people in order to kill them. He had slain his first cousin, a mere boy, to keep his hand in. He had slain half his friends and dripped the rest. Only one was spared, left whole.

"I should like to kill thee, too Maurice," said the duellist, regretfully; "but I cannot. I must have a friend—one friend—the Duello requires a second."

In return for this unparalleled magnanimity, Maurice seemed to love his friend extravagantly. Truly, he was a faithful jackal, was Maurice. It was said that upon more than one occasion he had furnished prey to the lion. He had pushed a poor young Vicomte and had forfeited his life the next morning at daylight. There were other instances, but the above will suffice. At any rate, Maurice was fond of contributing to his friend's vanity. At the cafe, or at the club, such a conversation (for the special benefit of bystanders) was not of rare occurrence:

Maurice (sipping his brandy)—"Let me see, my dear Achille, what is the number of your duels?"

Achille (sipping his brandy)—"Thirty-six, exactly."

Maurice—"And let me see—really I have forgotten—out of these thirty-six there were fatal—?"

Achille (twirling his moustache)—"Twenty-four."

Maurice—"And, my dear Achille, if I mistake not—really my memory is provoking—in those thirty-six duels you were wounded or scratched—?"

Achille (with pardonable hauteur)—"Never."

And upon a certain evening toward the end of March, when the cafe was overflowing, a conversation very similar to the above was brought to an unusual denouement.

The scornful "Never" had just burst from the curling lips of the Lieutenant, as it had burst successfully many a time before, when a young man glided from somewhere in the crowd to the side of the boaster and said, politely:

"Will Monsieur be so condescending as to favor me with his name!"

Achille de Beaumont, of the Guard."

"Monsieur, I have come from Lyons to seek you, continued the young man, and coolly elevating the half empty tumbler of the Maitre d'Armes, he cast the contents in his face.

The duelist appeared paralyzed with astonishment, but the young man left him no time to gape. Seizing the nose of the Maitre d'Armes, he pulled it, and wrung it, and twisted it, till the victim fairly squealed.

Then, still retaining his hold on the nose, with his disengaged hand he collected a handful of the filthy sawdust with which the floor of the cafe is covered, and crammed it down the vociferating mouth, at the same time rubbing it well into the eyes. Having gone thus far in a very quiet, business-like manner, the young man relieved the sufferer and stood, the crowd when it arrived there, and the time was so brief that the event gained but little further publicity before its occurrence.

When the last man of the panting crowd arrived, he saw the stranger standing in the centre of the little opening, completely environed by spectators. He was calmly awaiting his opponent, who was rapidly divesting himself on his coat and vest, with the assistance of Maurice. His preparations were few. When they were completed, he took his sword from Maurice, and advanced.

"Will not Monsieur take off his cloak?" said he, politely.

A shake of the head was the response.

"And has Monsieur no second?"

"I need none; there are many witness; I am ready."

He shook his right arm free from the folds of his cloak, which was fastened at the throat. A bare weapon was in his hand, and the conflict commenced.

It seemed unequal. Achille had all his skill—was as cool, as consummate as ever before; but his vigor had departed; his attack had but little fire, and even his matchless guard was hardly proof against the sturdy valor of the foe.

Once they almost closed. It was nearly night; and the sparks flew from their weapons in showers. They burst apart and staggered apart and staggered back to breathe—Achille with his left arm bleeding.

"Bon Dieu! are you hurt?" whispered Maurice.

"It is nothing—a mere touch—I do not feel it."

"O, Achille, my own Achille! you must push more fiercely, or you are lost—this is to the death!"

He took the advice, and went forward like a gladiator. There was a terrific struggle, involving pure physique as well as skill, and the Maitre d' Armes was rushing to the bare bosom of his foe, when, quick as thought, the latter threw his cloak wide open with his left arm, as if for a fairer target; but Achille saw something in there which appalled him, and he reeled back a step, letting his weapon sink a little—the next instant, the young man's rapier passed through his breast, the hilt rapping up against the ribs quite sharply.

Achille sank down on the the turf to die. He felt something pass over his heart like a heavy hand,—his tongue was dry, his ears were filled with strange murmurings, and tinklings, and languid pulses of sound; but he raised himself on his elbow and pointed through the mist which was before his eyes, then sighed again, and fell back in ruins.

What became of the stranger it was never known. He was not seen after his opponent fell, and his disappearance was a mystery, for the throng of bystanders made a complete hedge around the arena, and no one saw or felt him pass through. It is true Maurice swore that, when the young man had flung back his cloak, he had revealed a bare bosom, and a sword thrust wound through the heart of it, scarcely a day old, thus identifying him with the young man who had been slain in the morning.

But, then, Maurice did not repeat this assertion many times—in Paris, at least; for, now that his friend was dead, that very night before bedtime he was the recipient of six challenges, and by daylight the poor wretch was fleeing towards Spain in dismay.

GEN. MEADE AND HIS ARMY—100,000 MEN OF THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC KILLED AND WOUNDED.—Gen. Meade lately made a brief speech in Philadelphia, in response to Mayor Henry's address of welcome. He said:

When I came to the city to visit my family I did not anticipate such a demonstration as this of to-day, and, through you, I thank the citizens of Philadelphia. I feel, however, you attach too much importance to the services you have been kind enough to mention. With the Divine assistance, it is to the officers, and particularly to the heroic valor of the private soldiers, we owe the victory at Gettysburg. Had it not been for the spirit of determination in every private soldier when the army left Frederick, that he would leave his bones upon the field or drive back the invader, no ability of mine would have sufficed to win the battle of Gettysburg, and, therefore, on this occasion I desire to give the private soldiers this public acknowledgement. Before that battle I felt the deepest concern, as I knew what would be the result of a failure, and to my officers, corps, brigade, regimental and company commanders, and the privates, the country is indebted for the victory which crowned our efforts. I assure you, that the army, which has sometimes been called "unfortunate," is and will be acknowledged the most gallant army the world ever saw. As a statistic it may not be uninteresting to know that since March 1st, 1861, when that army left its lines in front of Washington, no less than one hundred thousand men have been killed and wounded. Such a record proves the valor of the troops. That army is inspired with a spirit of devotion to its country, and when the season for active work arrives, it shall be my pleasure to again lead that army, with the knowledge that its services are appreciated at home, and I shall be inspired by the thought that my fellow-citizens are interested in my welfare and will appreciate what is done. Allow me again to thank you.

GEN. MEAGHER ON COPPERHEADS.—At a reception meeting of the Irish Brigade in New York, Gen. Meagher, in rising to propose a toast in favor of President Lincoln, expressed himself in the following pointed manner:

Beware of what has grown to be the most significant designation of Northern enemies of this country—beware of the reptiles who are known as Copperheads. Have no parley with them; show them no mercy. [Applause and hisses.] For the enemies of this country are in the North, who have no excuse, who bid their friends go forth and to battle, and then cut down the bridges behind them so that they may fall sacrifices to the enemy, as they did when General Lee invaded Pennsylvania last summer, raising a revolt when you are battling for the Stars and Stripes upon the Susquehanna; as for these men we have nothing but detestation; and for the Irish portion of it, I deprecate, I loathe, I repudiate, I execrate them. [Applause.]

PROGRESS OF THE ANTI-SLAVERY SENTIMENT.—The anti-slavery feeling is spreading so rapidly throughout the country that in a short time very few will be found in favor of the iniquitous system. The absolute necessity for its extinction before anything can be accomplished for the repose of the nation, has taken hold of the minds and hearts of the people, and any attempt to retard the popular will must end in disaster. We are particularly pleased in the sentiment of Catholics on this subject. Those who, within a few months, would not even think on the subject of abolition, are now most anxious for its success, because they have commenced examining the question apart from party feeling or prejudice, and their good sense is convinced that the worst use that you put a human being to is to make him a slave. We hope the day is near when a clause in the Constitution will proclaim liberty to all men within the limits of the United States.—Catholic Telegraph.

FROM AN INDIGNANT MEXICAN.—The following appears in the Virginia Union, and is good enough to be a veritable letter:
